Dear DEEDI

Below is a picture of Queensland Bauxite Ltd drilling on our land on Saturday 18th June 2011.

The utilities in the picture are on the road, but the drilling and truck is some 6-8 metres inside my boundary at the end of the contour banks. I spoke to the drilling crew, they informed me that they didn't know they were on private land.

A month ago, QBL rang us to speak about drilling. I told them that we would need everything in writing. Some days later, we received a package of information in the mail. It appears to be the same written information they have given to other landholders in the area who they have had face to face meetings with.

QBL have never asked for or arranged a face to face meeting with us, and we have never given consent for them to drill on our land, verbally or in writing.

Is this the correct procedure according to the Land Access Code information that has been included in this information package that was posted to us?

If they haven't followed the correct procedure, are they trespassing on my land?

I look forward to your prompt response.

Yours faithfully
